About Coaching, Coffee, and Conversation, "Coaching, Coffee, and Conversation" offers a unique opportunity for participants to engage with industry leaders through speed coaching sessions. Attendees can learn more about sustainability, receive personal and professional development, and network with like-minded individuals—all while enjoying a cup of coffee or tea. This tour is free and open to the public, with events taking place in cities near you. Learn more about this inspiring initiative at TEAM IGNITE.

Through this event, a younger generation of consumers (Millennials and Gen Z) has become eager to explore ways to reduce waste and actively participate in the coaching, coffee and conversation sustainability movement. They are also keen to discuss strategies for mitigating the economic impact of COVID-19 and gain insights into sustainable products, processes, materials, benefits, and career opportunities within the realm of sustainability.

To reach a global audience and ignite sustainable practices on a grand scale, Team Ignite is collaborating with Fortune 500 companies, non-profit organizations, federal, state, and local governments, as well as cities. Together, they are developing sustainable solutions and scaling innovations to reduce environmental impact. Team Ignite encourages these entities to set ambitious, science-based targets, leverage data and analytics for valuable insights into their environmental impact. This data-driven approach identifies areas for improvement and enables organizations to take actions aligned with their sustainability objectives. Team Ignite also assists organizations in navigating sustainability certification processes such as organic or Fair-Trade labels, to demonstrate their commitment to responsible and ethical practices. "Team Ignite believes that the supply chain of sustainable materials matters more when manufacturing is done responsibly", Ignite Coach Ron Mitchell, JD, MBA.

Supply Chain Excellence is Team Ignite's goal vs supply chain issues which are increasingly prevalent today. Team Ignite addresses these concerns through a comprehensive approach that considers carbon, energy, waste, chemistry, and water across the entire product lifecycle. By doing so, Team Ignite ensures that informed decisions are made to improve conditions for various organizations and industry leaders.
