Dios Azul is Distilled in the Highlands of Puerto de Hierro in Jalisco Mexico with a Product Line That Includes, Blanco, Reposado, Plata Premium, and Anejo Tequilas

On September 12th WTII announced it had signed an agreement with Tequila Dios Azul. LLC., a Delaware company based in California. Dios Azul Tequila is produced in Jalisco, Mexico, and imported to California. Jalisco, Mexico, the town of Tequila, was the site of the state's first tequila factory, established in 1600. Tequila, made from the juice of the blue agave cactus, grown in the Highlands of Perto de Hierro is Jalisco's best-known product. A fifth-generation family of Tequila distillers produces Dios Azul. The Company is working on registering trademarks and labeling for the sale of its Tequila Brands in several States. The Company was approved for licensing in California and should be licensed in Arizona, soon.

WTII CEO, William Scott Tudor, said, "I am excited about Dios Azul a new Premium Tequila Brand that has been very well received in California, and we expect it to become popular in several other States. Being a new Tequila in the beverage industry is extremely exciting. Our previous contacts in the beverage industry get excited when you start talking about a premium quality Tequila Brand with several skus. We need to increase and diversify our revenue growth. We hope to acquire another company with existing sales and distribution so we can insure traction for our water and other products over the next few years."

Dios Azul, LLC.'s President, Robert Laird, said "I am extremely excited to leverage our premium Brand of Tequilas with a public company. I can see this new relationship will open doors for our growing company. We produce high-quality tequilas that are made from the Blue Agave grown in the Highlands of Puerto de Hierro in Jalisco, Mexico.
