as a Service (PaaS), bringing Web 3.0's paradigm-shifting technology to the equity crowdfunding industry. Dacxi Chain makes it easy for localized equity crowdfunding platforms to harness Web 3.0's tools, and use them to take their businesses global. This means start-ups can raise capital more quickly and easily, and global innovation can reach all-new heights.

As Dacxi Chain CEO Ian Lowe explains, shaping this future means first examining the past. “As Dacxi Chain unveils the next chapters in equity crowdfunding, it's vital to understand how we got here,” says Lowe. “Tracking the evolution of crowdfunding highlights the unique set of challenges facing the industry today. From lack of scale, to regulatory red tape, to the issue of cross-border investments.”

Dacxi Chain itself poses the solution to many of these challenges. By applying Web 3.0 tools such as blockchain and tokenization to equity crowdfunding, Dacxi Chain makes it simpler than ever for equity crowdfunding platforms to facilitate cross-border investments. The PaaS also connects the world’s diverse equity crowdfunding platforms into one singular global network – exponentially increasing the visibility of capital-raising campaigns all over the world.

“With the solution to equity crowdfunding’s historical challenges now on the horizon, there’s never been a more exciting time for the industry,” says Lowe. “That makes now the perfect moment to take stock of crowdfunding’s journey so far, and examine where that journey could lead us tomorrow.”

As part of its efforts to usher in equity crowdfunding’s next era, Dacxi Chain has announced an upcoming capital raise. Expressions of interest and opportunities to participate are now open via [\[Equitise for Australia and New Zealand\]](#) and [\[Angels Den for the UK\]](#).
