It's even common for Gio to get compared on a regular basis to Kansas City Chiefs Superbowl Winning Quarterback Patrick Mahomes. On a recent interview of On Air with Brandon Jay on iHeart Radio Brandon, asked Gio the question of the similar comparisons. Gio's response

"It's wild to get compared to Patrick where i'm treated with VIP treatment. People even asks for my autograph."

In his latest song, of "Dollar," Anyone can lose money, but love is the only thing that you can never put a price tag.

"Dollar" reinforces that meaning of giving back to those who are less fortunate, and love buys more happiness.

The song doesn't try to impersonate any other prominent artists, Gio stands alone. His story is letting his listeners know that love is the biggest weapon to facing adversity.

"I'm a loyal to my music and enjoy making music that people can relate to and get a good vibe from," Gio adding why music has been his passion. "I'm passionate about sports and love when I can find ways to connect the two."

As for "Dollar," it's all a matter of enjoying the song because there's a story to tell that can relate to anyone. Rich, middle class, or struggling, this song is for everyone because all individuals go through a different phase in their life.

"Just to enjoy it, it's a real upbeat song, to just really catch a vibe you know. It's definitely old school R&B," said Gio about his latest song. "It has stood the test of time, it had a way it could tell a story, a story you could either relate to or was experiencing in your life."

"I want my listeners to hear Dollar and really just catch a vibe from it."
