LongRoad was formed when the other members met Ted Ames at the Knitting Factory in NYC and decided that the commonality of musical influence and interest among them should be explored further together.

The band's first release, This Too Shall Pass, received airplay on more than 140 college stations nationwide, including several university Top 10 playlists. The band has also received regional airplay on commercial rock stations, such as 105.5 WDHA. Notable shows for the This Too Shall Pass support tour included opening for Candlebox, Buckcherry and Cracker.

After a hiatus, the band is back together and has recorded its second studio album, Faith in Greater Things? The album will be released September 15th to Apple
