"Compassion is proven to boost efficiency, enhance performance, and bring great results in the workplace," said Toni McLelland. "A study by Harvard Business Review highlighted that leaders must 'live to give' rather than 'give to get' to get the best results, and 80% of leaders would like to enhance their compassion in leadership but don't know how. Through this LinkedIn Live, we hope to share how compassion, underpinned by DEIB, brings positive, sustainable change for individual leaders and organizations."

In this LinkedIn Live, participants will learn how to:

- Prioritize compassion as a cornerstone of effective leadership for success in today's world
- Recognize the enduring influence of compassion in leadership
- Explore how compassion can drive sustainable change and fortify or future-proof your business achievements
- Harness the transformative potential of compassion when coupled with the principles of Diversity, Equity, Inclusion, and Belonging (DEIB) through Toni's unique BLEND Model

"We believe that compassion is a critical component of a healthy workplace culture," said Robin Salsberry, President of Propositions, Inc. "Toni McLelland is truly the 'Queen of Compassion,' and we're excited for her to share her expertise on how organizations can create a more supportive and collaborative environment that benefits everyone through compassion."

Toni recently partnered with Propositions to create the upcoming micro and nanolearning course, "The Compassionate Leader," designed for leaders at all levels.
