With Language+, NoteGoat can now produce notes from any English-language lecture in Chinese, Hindi, and Spanish, as well as Arabic, Bengali, Japanese, Korean, Marathi, Portuguese, Tamil, Telugu, and Vietnamese.

OpenDoors reported that in 2022 there were 948,519 international college students taking U.S. classes in person or online, accounting for 4.7% of the total U.S. higher education population. Enrollees from China (290,086 or 30.6%) and India (199,182 or 21.0%) made up the majority.

"With a growing number of American colleges enrolling international students whose first language isn't English, our Language+ feature provides administrators with an excellent resource to help them thrive and stay in school," said Anh Hatzopoulos, NoteGoat founder and CEO. "International students have become an integral part of higher education, so their success is essential to the operations of the institutions they attend."

"As the AI revolution accelerates across every industry, I am most excited about the opportunities for higher education," commented Anne-Marie Coyne, Ed. M., Harvard Graduate School of Education. "We are just beginning to re-imagine student resources and adaptive learning tools to increase accessibility while leveling the playing field for all students."

NoteGoat, which launched in August, uses optimized AI engines to generate key points and a summary of any live or virtual lecture across all majors and subjects. It's easy to use, works on a laptop, tablet or phone, and is available with a free trial.
