EINPresswire.com/ -- In August, the true crime podcast Ghosts and Garnets took listeners on a rollercoaster ride through some of Idaho's most enigmatic true crime stories. The podcast now has over 50,000 listeners across 55 countries, and it's trending fast. With hosts Whitney Rivera and Camden Schacher at the helm, Ghosts and Garnets continues to captivate true crime enthusiasts worldwide with chilling tales and entertaining commentary.

First up in August were their most popular episodes — the enthralling two-part series on Lori Vallow and Chad Daybell. Podcast hosts Rivera and Schacher take a snarky perspective on the unsettling case and share new insights you've probably never heard on this newsline story.

Co-host of Ghosts and Garnets, Camden Schacher, comments on the deranged love story of Lori Vallow and Chad Daybell and shares, "I just got the shivers. It is mind-boggling how somebody could be lusting over somebody so much that they would be willing to murder their own child. The delusion these two carry is truly unbelievable. And what's even crazier — they are not even attempting to hide or cover anything up. Insanity is an understatement."

Next up on "Episode 47: The Internment of Lloyd Ford," Rivera and Schacher unraveled a 30-year-old family mystery laden with marriage, murder, and guilt. Things got even juicier on the next episode, which exposed the web of lies, cheating, and deadly consequences in the Kandi Hall, Rob Hall, and Emmett Corrigan story.

Wrapping up August was a journey filled with scheming and manipulation in "Episode 49:

I just got the shivers. It is mind-boggling how somebody could be lusting over somebody so much that they would be willing to murder their own child."
