About Ted Rigoni

"My collections and themes are more than just a visual diary; they are a journey into the unknown—be it physical, emotional, or conceptual. My work is inspired by moments of sudden clarity, abstract musings, and those far-off adventures into the wilderness."

Ted's solo exhibit, Bygone Patterns \(https://bit.ly/3RwEhRR\) in The Center Gallery, is a 12-piece contemporary art presentation of the Mojave Desert's remains, a modern-day re-purposing of the discarded and forgotten metals employed by the early miners and ranchers who settled and left this unforgiving land of heat and hard work. The basis of each work is a single digital image of a castoff piece of metal or machine, now regenerated into an artistic, patterned representation obscuring its origins to all but the most imaginative.

Bygone Patterns has received critical acclaim because Ted blends traditional photographic methods with cutting-edge technology to create arresting, thought-provoking abstract pieces.

Each of his works delves into themes of identity, perception, and invites viewers to engage in an introspective journey.

What to Expect

Visitors to the Gallery 825 Exhibit can expect an eclectic mix of styles and mediums, with Ted Rigoni's photography offering a compelling narrative that resonates with a wide range of audiences. His work in this show promises to be a visual feast, combining color, composition, and texture in a way that challenges the conventions of contemporary art photography.
