“I thoroughly enjoy delving into a person's background to learn about their moments of brilliance, unique experiences and brushes with fame – their 15 minutes,” says Brent McMahon, My Fifteen Minutes Podcast founder and host. “I believe listeners will gain inspiration hearing our guests' personal anecdotes about the obstacles they have overcome.”

McMahon says his inspiration for the podcast loosely comes from artist Andy Warhol memorably saying, "In the future, everyone will be world-famous for 15 minutes."

McMahon's brushes with fame and interesting twists and turns of life while building successful companies and working on his love of fitness also played into starting the podcast.

He goes on to say, "You don't have to be a star to have your moment of fame. Everyone has a captivating story and I'm excited to give them a platform to share it."

McMahon is a serial entrepreneur, business consultant and investor. His success comes from building businesses from nothing and turning them into multimillion-dollar companies. Known for turning McMahon's RV into a national powerhouse in the recreational vehicle industry, McMahon also successfully built and sold Greenlife Botanix, a CBD skincare company. More recently, McMahon started BMMC, a business consultancy. He has served as a business advisor to Revenant MJ, a cannabis brand led by NFL champions Jim McMahon and Kyle Turley along with former McMahon's RV executive Mike Lankford.
