procedures, have become essential in contemporary healthcare institutions. This article examines the market for customized procedure trays and its development, trends, and importance.

Figure 1: A rise in minimally invasive procedures is the result of developments in medical technology. The overall effectiveness of these procedures is improved by the use of CPTs, which provide a practical technique to guarantee that all relevant tools and equipment are immediately available in the operating room.

Figure 2: Healthcare facilities may face logistical difficulties while managing a variety of medical supplies. CPTs simplify inventory management by offering a complete set of services for particular operations. This lessens waste, lowers the possibility of stockouts, and enhances cost management.
