The airline industry has revolutionized with digital transformation from mobile check-in apps to interactive digital displays and many others. Recent developments in the airline industry proliferate the growth of the airport kiosk market. Kiosks are considered a valuable addition to the airport, improving the customer experience while enhancing the airport infrastructure. Moreover, the incorporation of technology allows to upgrade airport infrastructure and services. Safeguarding customer data from the threat of cyber-security transfers the focus of authorities to incorporate Information Technology (IT) solutions that serve a better and safer interface. Such factors are anticipated to boost the growth of the global airport kiosk market.

By using self-service kiosks, passengers are given full control of their travel, which makes the product's use even more convenient. Such practices are incorporated by the industry to strengthen customer and organizational privacy, which, in turn, boosts the growth of the airport kiosk market. In addition, latest technological advancements, such as self-serving technologies, multiple entertainment options, and digital advisor facilities, foster the growth for the market. However, the inclusion of technology creates the risk of threat to cyber-security, but massive spending by airport authorities for safeguarding sensitive customer information is anticipated to lower the risk while maintaining a steady pace of growth. Furthermore, innovations and new product developments are anticipated to push sufficient product demand over the forecast period.

Airport authorities across the globe focus on providing convenience to consumers by adopting self-service solutions at the airport. In addition, increase in installations of airport kiosks resulted in reduced passenger delay, which assists the airport authorities to manage the air traffic. Moreover, to improve airport experience and enhance customer satisfaction, airport authorities escalate their spending on developing advanced technologies, thereby flourishing the airport kiosk market growth. In addition, owing to the consistent footfall of tourists, the need to create better-serving booths emerges, ultimately driving the demand for airline kiosks. Therefore, the proliferation of airport kiosks in the airline industry is anticipated to improve the overall experience, thereby adding value to the airports.
