LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, September 29, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Lion Alternative Energy

We have been inspired to support Lion because of their work with the University Hospital Zurich and Stadtspital Zurich"

Esat Likaj, LIKA's CEO

Lion's experimental data suggests that their nano-sized diamond-hard carbon coatings reduce the leading cause of implant failure through higher biocompatibility and better bio-integration with the surrounding connective tissue during long-term encapsulation.

Having arrived in Switzerland from a poor background, LIKA's CEO, Esat Likaj has built one of Switzerland's leading property developers. Having benefited from Switzerland's welcoming environment he is committed to contributing to Switzerland's future and the health of future generations.

Esat Likaj, LIKA's CEO, stated that "we have been inspired to support Lion because of their work with the University Hospital Zurich and Stadtspital Zurich to develop the next generation of implants and heart valves". Lion's diamond-hard nano-carbon coating will extend the durability of these prothesis and reduce or even remove the need for anticoagulant therapy.

Lion's strategic goal is to position itself as a leader in the nano-carbon coating marketplace by developing a range of coating applications for the industry. Heart valves are the first step of the journey.
