The three NGOs, Cancer Aid and Research Fund, Feed God's Hungry Children, and Heart Disease Research Institute, are set to revolutionize the fight against cancer, childhood hunger, and heart disease through innovative programs and resources.

Born in 1945 in Duncan, B.C., Canada, Larry Mackay's desire to make a meaningful difference has been evident since his early years. Nurtured by his love for sports, which instilled a sense of community and teamwork, Mackay's philanthropic endeavors seek to support those most vulnerable. After completing his engineering studies at the University of Victoria, Mackay embarked on a life-changing journey, attending a Bible School in Sierra Vista, Arizona. After graduating with honors, he married Joy Mackay in 1970, and together, they dedicated their lives to serving others.

The first of the three NGOs introduced by Larry Mackay is the Cancer Aid & Research Fund. Committed to advancing cancer research and support initiatives, the organization provides vital grants to hospitals and clinics engaged in groundbreaking cancer research. Additionally, it ships essential medical equipment and supplies to aid in treatment and ensures patients and families have access to valuable resources about cancer. Since its establishment in 1989, the Cancer Aid & Research Fund has stood at the forefront of cancer research and support, tirelessly working towards finding a cure while providing holistic patient care.

Feed God's Hungry Children, the second NGO spearheaded by Larry Mackay emerges as a beacon of hope for underprivileged children. Dedicated to transforming lives and brightening futures, the charity delivers life-changing support to those in need. Since 2001, Feed God's Hungry Children has provided countless children with essential supplies, nourishment, education, and shelter, enduringly impacting their lives. By addressing the issue of childhood hunger, the organization believes in feeding not just the body but also nurturing hope, dreams, and a better tomorrow.

The third NGO, the Heart Disease Research Institute, is committed to fighting heart disease on multiple fronts. Its comprehensive support system has significantly impacted providing medical equipment, supplies, and compassionate care to clinics and individuals in need. Established in 2005, the Heart Disease Research Institute aims to improve the heart health of individuals worldwide through impactful research and patient-centered initiatives.

Larry Mackay's vision for these NGOs stems from a deep commitment to improving the world. "By tackling these critical issues head-on, we can save lives, transform communities, and empower individuals to live healthier, happier lives," says Mackay. Through collaboration with medical professionals, research institutions, and generous donors, Mackay's NGOs aim to rewrite the narratives of cancer, childhood hunger, and heart disease.
