(<https://www.shopkhoj.com/clothing/tant-jamdani-dhakai-sarees/>).Kobita Jugnauth, the wife of Mauritius' Prime Minister joined her husband in choosing ethnic Indian wear by donning a saree. UK Prime Minister Rishi Sunak's wife Akshata Murthy was covered in the press every day for the variety of outfits she wore including a simple yet stylish powder pink Chanderi sari which featured dainty gold work when she departed India to return to the UK.

Cotton, Kota, Chanderi (<https://www.shopkhoj.com/clothing/chanderi-silk-sarees/>) Venkatagiri, Gadwal, georgette, silk cotton, chiffon & Jamdani are lighter fabrics and suitable as summer sarees. The variety of sarees available in each Indian State is simply astounding. Similarly, Silk sarees, Banarasi sarees, Tussar and satin sarees are more suitable to be worn in the winter months.

With its origins in Punjab and Pakistan, the Salwar Kameez or the salwar suit is an ethnic garment popular with women all over the country. The salwar kameez dress is an attractive and elegant option while providing comfort and ease of use. Women love to pair this outfit with a nicely adorned dupatta (scarf or stole). The versatility of this simple and elegant sartorial choice lends itself to a variety of occasions. Simple outfits made of cotton or simple fabrics are ideal for everyday wear, whereas suits made of different types of silks with embroidery or other work gives the wearer a chance to shine at formal occasions. Dupattas of different kinds can be combined and used to enhance and add a different dimension of glamor to the outfit.

International monetary Fund Managing Director, Kristalina Georgieva opted for the salwar Kameez (<https://www.shopkhoj.com/clothing/salwar-kameez/>) at the gala dinner hosted by Prime Minister Narendra Modi. Her purple salwar with a golden dupatta was a perfect choice for the festive yet formal occasion. The Prime Minister of Italy Giorgia Meloni also chose the Indian ethnic route in a black kurta set with mauve gold dupatta.

Salwar Kameez/Salwar suits in cotton, chiffon, georgette, lace or Chanderi fabric are very light and comfortable. The Lucknowi chikankari, (<https://www.shopkhoj.com/clothing/chikankari-kurti/>) fabric, which has white coloured embroidery on the reverse of the fabric, is perhaps the ideal summer fabric. In summer, it is an ideal dress that keeps you well covered from the sunlight & heat. The salwar kameez is ideal in winter months as well. Salwar suits in woollen, silk, satin & Tussar, all of which are heavier fabrics, are more suitable in winters. They keep you cosy & warm.

There are quite a few of shops for Indian ethnic clothes. Fab India, Anokhi, Lifestyle, Shoppers Stop, Westside & Pantaloon are shops that are pan India. They stock salwar kameez & kurtis in a variety of styles. Some of them stock sarees as well. Some shops are city specific. That is what makes shopping in India a great experience. Salwar Lane in Lajpat Nagar is a good place for cotton salwar suits in Delhi. Similarly, Soma & Suvasa are well known shops for ethnic clothes in Delhi & Jaipur.

Many of the delegates sported a blend of Indo-Western wear at the G20 Summit. Rishi Sunak's wife sported beautiful Indo western fusion garments on more than one occasion. Her beautifully embroidered skirt, paired with a white shirt was stylish & elegant. The press was mesmerised to say the least.

Mixing and matching ethnic & western clothes is a popular trend - a sari gown which is draped and ready to wear sari with a gown like appearance. Jeans or trousers with the kameez & the kurti is another style that is trendy & popular too. The long jacket or the short Nehru jacket paired with jeans or palazzo pants or skirts is also very fashionable. Skirts, that are essentially a western garment, become ethnic with Indian prints and designs.

In conclusion, women in India have an incredible choice when it comes to shopping for clothes. Indian clothes are popular through the world. With several Indian shops gearing up for online shopping, women all over the world have an incredible variety to choose.
