In partnership with established and new musical acts, Brooklyn Art Haus is excited to bring a new nightlife destination to Williamsburg. In its first iteration, Brooklyn Art Haus will be working with Wild Birds, a music venue known for producing high quality and diverse range of performances and a fun, exciting atmosphere.

A preview show took place with Yasser Tejeda, a guitarist, composer and producer from the Dominican Republic and Dirtyfinger, a NYC based DJ. The night featured live projection mapping to enhance the experience, giving attendees an immersive experience. This type of holistic event will be carried forward in shows moving forward, alongside other experiential elements.

More About Wild Birds:

Julian Klepper was the founder and co-owner of one of Brooklyn's most beloved music venues, Wild Birds. As a music venue and eatery, Wild Birds spotlighted global music, with each day of the week featuring a different theme, from groove base music, rocksteady, jazz, swing, blues, too cumbia and raggae as well as a fusion of these genres. Wild Birds soon became known as a musician's music venue and attracted some of the most talented musicians in NYC to play there when not on tour. Julian created a residency program at Wild Birds for the most popular and renowned musicians who performed there, locking in their loyalty while also building a loyal audience.

More about Julian Klepper:

Prior to opening up Wild Birds, Julian spent 10 years making film and teaching art at the Lincoln center, TriBeCa's Film Institute, Truce, a part of the Harlem Children Zone, among other leading community arts education foundations/institutions in NYC. He is well versed in arts education and policy, community outreach and youth enrichment activities through the arts. He has created (as well as collaborated on developing) a number of curricula for teaching film and video editing. Julian is a graduate of the University of Rochester and Allderdice high school.
