Sending care packages to our troops is a gesture of immense love and respect. We believe in amplifying this gesture by making the process more affordable and personal”

Michelle Williamson

In recent years, many organizations and individuals have turned to the USPS's free flat-rate boxes for sending care packages to military personnel stationed overseas. However, with the costs of flat-rate shipping, it can become a pricey venture, often reducing the number of care packages that can be sent.

ShipThrifty's innovative online discount shipping, which is supported by military nonprofit organizations across the nation, showcases how using customized boxes can save up to $8 per package compared to traditional flat-rate boxes. The partnership website <https://www.ucanpack.com/shiphthriftly.html> facilitates easy ordering of these branded boxes, providing an affordable and more personalized alternative.

But this partnership isn't just about saving money. It's also about showing support. Corporations now have the unique opportunity to sponsor the purchase of boxes, displaying their logo as a token of their commitment to our troops. This initiative not only aids organizations in sending more care packages but also fosters a sense of community and shared responsibility towards those serving our nation.

"Sending care packages to our troops is a gesture of immense love and respect. We believe in amplifying this gesture by making the process more affordable and personal," says Michelle Williamson, Co-Founder of ShipThriftly, "Our partnership with Ucanpack is a significant stride in that direction."

Anish Patel, a representative of Ucanpack adds, "Branding is powerful. It's not just about a logo on a box; it's a stamp of solidarity, support, and honor for our military personnel. We're thrilled to join hands with ShipThriftly in this meaningful endeavor."
