Ray and Stocker were recognized at the MEA Gas Operations Technical & Leadership Summit in Cincinnati for their long-time leadership and contribution to the gas industry. Elliott was recognized for her many years of service at the recent Purchasing & Materials Management Roundtable in Kansas City, MO.

Rich, Ray, and Marie represent the very best in the energy industry.”

John Gann of MEA

Elliott has served on the Purchasing & Materials Management Committee for 16 years including a year as Chair and was widely respected for her leadership and contribution to attendees at the annual purchasing conference.

Ray served on the MEA Gas Safety Committee for 11 years including a year as Chair and participated in 20 MEA learning events freely offering his experience and knowledge.

Stocker has served on the Gas Distribution Committee for 14 years and on the Gas Associate Exhibit Committee for 5 years, including a year as Chair. In addition, he was a frequent presenter at the MEA Leak Detection Course and represented SENSIT Technologies as part of their marketing outreach at over 60 MEA learning events.

Hall of Fame inductees exemplify the spirit of great leaders. These outstanding individuals have shared their time and expertise with the industry through MEA by serving on committees and volunteering at meetings and events. "Rich, Ray, and Marie represent the very best in the energy industry," said John Gann, senior vice president at MEA. "Each are highly respected for who they are and what they have done for the industry. These awards are well-deserved."
