Postpartum Depression Drug Market– Restraint

Antidepressant drug refusals by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (U.S. FDA) are expected to be a major restraint in growth of the postpartum depression drug market over the forecast period. For instance, in April 2018, the U.S. FDA refused New Drug Application of Alkermes plc.'s drug candidate ALKS 5461 which is to be administered orally. The drug could be useful in treating depressive disorders, which cannot be treated by other standard drug therapies. This refusal was due to failures in action of this oral medication.
