Essay Question: Barnard celebrates intellectual risk-taking, and we believe that academic inquiry starts with bold questions. What questions do you have about the world around you, and why do they matter to you?

Coaching Corner
Expert guidance for your essay and access to intuitive tools to tailor it to perfection.

Living in the heart of Silicon Valley, I am constantly surrounded by innovation and technological advancements that spark my curiosity about how we can use computer science and math to create efficient systems, develop solutions, and bridge gaps. Inspired by my mother's success as a woman in tech, I immersed myself in STEM at school and launched a business helping companies adapt to Google's rules. As co-founder of Code-matics, I gained immense satisfaction empowering members to excel in hackathons.

While overcoming childhood obesity taught me resilience, Barnard's emphasis on intellectual risk-taking deeply resonates. The college's rigorous programs in my fields of interest provide an ideal platform to explore solutions to intriguing questions through interdisciplinary learning. I look forward to joining ACM-W, taking courses like Machine Learning, and guiding other women in STEM as a TA. Barnard's tight-knit community in New York City is the perfect environment for me to grow alongside driven women, asking daring questions without fear of failure.

As I reflect on healthcare accessibility and other global issues, countless questions ignite my curiosity. I will have ample opportunities to leverage technology for improved healthcare delivery at Barnard's cutting-edge facilities like The Milstein Center. I can't wait to be part of a community that celebrates intellectual risk-taking and empowers women to ask bold questions that change the world.
