Our mission is to help pet parents give their pets a happier, healthier and longer life. We are proud to support Project Street Vet's mission to provide judgment-free veterinary care to those in need.”

Hilary Palotay, Director of Corporate Responsibility at Fetch

Last year's inaugural campaign raised over $316,000 enabling Project Street Vet to expand from four communities to seven, double its volunteer workforce from sixty to over a hundred and twenty and secure recognition for its efforts from The Los Angeles Times (<https://www.latimes.com/california/story/2023-01-18/veterinarian-free-care-homeless-peoples-pets-the-street-vet>), AP (<https://apnews.com/article/california-homeless-pets-street-veterinarian-ed7c4759cb54753f6fc1ccf43c766e9c>), NPR and the Today Show (<https://www.nbc.com/today/video/am-i-ready-to-adopt-a-pet-3-things-to-consider/NBCN997637899>). Project Street Vet Co-Founder, Dr. Kwane Stewart has also been nominated a 2023 CNN Hero

(<https://www.cnn.com/2023/04/14/us/california-street-veterinary-medicine-pets-cnnheroes/index.html>) for his more than a decade of service providing care to the pets of people experiencing homelessness.

"We are truly humbled by the generosity shown during last year's campaign. It helped us nearly double in size this year and grow our team of incredible volunteers. Everyone has the power to make a difference, no matter how big or small their contribution may be. Whether it's donating resources, sharing with your networks or volunteering your time, every action helps us build awareness and support more pets in 2024," said Dr. Kwane.

"Our mission is to help pet parents give their pets a happier, healthier and longer life and we believe in the fierce and unbreakable bond pet parents have with their animals, which is why we're proud to support Project Street Vet's mission to provide judgment-free veterinary care to those in need. Since 2022 Fetch's fundraising efforts have driven more than $400,000 to support their work and we're excited to host the 101 Donations Campaign again," said Hilary Palotay, Director of Corporate Responsibility at Fetch.

Donations enable Project Street Vet to recruit, train and resource volunteers who provide judgment-free care to the pets of people experiencing homelessness. From a basic exam, to vaccinations, flea and tick medications and more, volunteers support each client's unique needs. Funding also makes it possible for Project Street Vet to help with follow-up care and more costly treatments like life-saving surgeries and procedures. Project Street Vet has provided care to more than 1,000 pets already this year.

Fetch partners supporting the campaign at the time of launch include: AXIS, SPRYFOX, Cozen O'Connor, Vetster, Warburg Pincus, Milliman, The Vernon Company and ZippyPaws.
