BRISTOL, CT, UNITED STATES, October 23, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Productions for Change, a nonprofit organization committed to leveraging the power of video to address critical societal issues, is proud to announce the launch of "No Way to Live," a poignant documentary series that exposes the stark realities of homelessness in Central Connecticut.

"No Way to Live" will begin as a series of short documentaries. Each episode will focus on a different myth about those who are homeless, those who are trying to help, and the issues that make homelessness a seemingly unsolvable dilemma. By using the voices of those most affected, Productions for Change seeks to share real stories and engender conversations about the way communities understand and address homelessness.

This project has really opened my eyes. The stories of the homeless are difficult to hear.”

Thomas Mazzarella

“This project has really opened my eyes,” said Tom Mazzarella, president, producer, and founder of Productions for Change. “The stories of the homeless are difficult to hear. By sharing these personal accounts, we hope to build a genuine understanding of the policies and societal issues that got us here, and the actions that will be needed to eliminate homelessness here in Connecticut.”

Mazzarella also explained that the name of the documentary, “No Way to Live,” was inspired by one of those interviewed - a man who recently passed away while living on the street. “As he told us his story, the piece that stood out was that changing clothes in a tent in the middle of winter was no way to live. He was right - that is unimaginable! As a salute to his legacy, we are even more devoted to helping those without adequate housing.”

The ongoing docuseries is available on YouTube and most social media platforms. Viewers can easily access episodes every other week through the Productions for Change website. The full documentary will premiere on March 2, 2024, at the Rockwell Theater in Bristol.
