it too?

The cost of living becomes unbearable.

Environmental problems are becoming serious. More and more wars. Our current political landscape seems incapable of finding a solution. Our world needs a peaceful revolution. But what does that look like? And how can we make it happen? The answers lie in understanding the problem and its root cause and then proposing an innovative solution. First, let's unravel two

Only with a Financial Renaissance can we break the political impasse that has been going on for so long!”

Jean-Paul Fonteijn

Now let's delve into the problem.

Why do politicians fail to address the escalating cost of living? The answer lies in the flow of wealth. For centuries, money has been steadily siphoned off from the pockets of working people to the vaults of the super rich. This wealth leakage is the primary culprit behind the rising cost of living, which is pushing more and more people towards financial distress. So if we increase taxes, which are predominantly paid by the working population, the cost of living will only continue its upward trajectory. Left leaning parties recognize the problem of escalating living costs and want to address it. Right leaning parties, on the other hand, understand that hiking taxes will only exacerbate the issue. Both sides have valid points, but neither offers a solution. We're at a political impasse, but there is light at the end of the tunnel.

Humanity stands at a critical crossroads.

We can either continue to flounder in our national politics, allowing wealth to bleed away to a select few, or we can join forces with countries worldwide to enact revolutionary legislative changes that redirect the flow of wealth back to the working people. How? By implementing a significant wealth tax on the super rich and ensuring that corporate profits benefit not just shareholders, but employees, too. This way, money can flow back into the hands of working people, fostering healthier economies and governments. These changes will empower us to tackle not only the rising cost of living, but also the pressing environmental, poverty and health issues plaguing our world today. It's time to roll up our sleeves and jump into action.

It's time to break the political impasse!

It's time for a Financial Renaissance!

1. New tax for the super-rich
2. Corporate profits also go to employees
3. Current taxes reduced
