

LiveKill Announces New Single and Video for "New Plague"

LiveKill is pleased to announce the upcoming release of their latest single and video, "New Plague" out October 27, 2023.

FLORIDA, US, October 23, 2023
/EINPresswire.com/ -- LiveKill is pleased to announce the upcoming release of their latest single and video, "New Plague" out October 27, 2023. This thrilling second installment of a three-part narrative story dives into the chilling consequences of AI and modern technology.

As the story unfolds, LiveKill aims to paint a vivid soundscape that mirrors the unyielding grip of technology on our lives.

"New Plague" deals with themes of "greater intelligence" or "Ether" populating the galaxy with chaos. To Earth this entity delivered the New Plague, humanity.

We wanted to question our existence, maybe the driving force behind humanity isn't something benevolent? What if we're some kind of virus spreading throughout the universe?"

John Snell

"We wanted to question the origins of life – if we were put here by some unknown entity, maybe the driving force behind humanity isn't something benevolent? What if we're some kind of virus spreading throughout the universe?"
– John Snell [Production, Guitar]

LiveKill invites you to join them on this electrifying adventure and experience the raw power of their music and storytelling. Stay tuned for the upcoming third installment, promising an unforgettable climax to this epic narrative.
