about business; it's personal. We've cheered, celebrated, and stood strong together. As we evolve our partnership, I'm excited about the future we will shape for our South Florida community," said Georgedakis.

At the heart of this partnership lies a common theme: The Miami HEAT's #HEATCulture - characterized by grit, unity, and unwavering resolve on and off the field - finds its echo in the Good Greek Way, which is built on pillars of Strength, Honor, Faith, and Courage. It's this shared commitment to excellence that resonates both on the basketball court and in community endeavors. "Good Greek has been a great partner with the HEAT for several seasons," said Glen Oskin, Vice President of Corporate Partnerships for the Miami HEAT. "Partnerships with companies based here in Florida are vital to our organization and we couldn't be happier to extend our relationship with Good Greek." Fans can anticipate an increased Good Greek presence at the Kaseya Center. Both entities, renowned for their philanthropic efforts, will look for more opportunities to collaborate. While the Miami HEAT's Charitable Fund tirelessly supports at-risk families, Good Greek's dedication to disaster assistance, recovery, and addressing food insecurity will continue to make waves in South Florida's community efforts. The synergy of these initiatives is set to bring about a positive change that goes beyond basketball.
