Joseph Riquelme, a recent addition to the GoSprout advisory team, reflects on the GoSprout launch and shares, "I'm excited about the GoSprout platform and the impact it can have in facilitating and expanding apprenticeship opportunities, helping organizations grow and serve their customers with a skilled team."

Joseph joins the team with a career leading digital education at some of the nation's top programs including 14 years at Florida International University and more recently 3 years as Vice Provost and Chief Online Officer at American University. "Apprenticeship is another way to expand access to opportunities that can have a positive impact on social mobility. They create closer alignment and collaboration between employers and educators and when I reflected on the GoSprout mission, it reminded me why I am passionate about online education. It's all about expanding access and opportunities."

The Apprenticeship Accelerator event promises to be an exhilarating experience for those committed to advancing the growth of registered apprenticeship programs and those who aspire to begin their journey.
