About Safa Shax: Safa Shaqsy started singing and writing stories when she was eight years old. She lived in a bedroom apartment, and her parents worked hard to sustain a living. Her father was the only parent who had a job, and living in that apartment was hard, but she made it fun. She had two sisters and one brother, and she played "imagine" with her brother quite often. After starting college, her mother got dementia and separated to live with her family. While her mother was away, Safa took care of her siblings, with the help of her dad, and focused on her college. For years, she and her father made websites to start their online business, but nothing ever worked. After graduating college, she got a job and almost opened a business, but it failed since day one, and she had debts.

Safa started writing books and worked in a job. She thought that was her passion, and submitted so many queries around, more than a thousand, but she got rejected. She thought that if she opened her publishing house, it would be successful, but the publishing house failed as well, keeping her in debt. Years later, she met an online friend who helped her rediscover her passion for singing. She rejected the idea a few times, saying she would never sing. But after publishing one book as a pre-order, she thought of making a playlist of her songs with the theme of her book. Many people loved it too. It wasn't just her who listened to her songs. She was confused, and changed her name to Safa Shax, to stay anonymous. She changed her song styles and brand. For months, no one knew who she was, until one day she asked herself a question, "Did I work hard for fifteen years, only for my success to be hidden?" Then she revealed her true identity.
