manufacturer and supplier of high-quality equipment solutions, has selected Evotix, the world-leading environment, health, safety (EHS) and well-being software company, as its trusted EHS software provider. The partnership elevates and aligns Multiquip's EHS practices for its 600 international employees.

Multiquip has built a reputation for manufacturing and distributing top-quality equipment to serve the construction, industrial, telecom, government, aerospace, entertainment and oil and gas exploration industries, while prioritizing customer care and satisfaction. With Evotix, Multiquip will streamline EHS management and bolster its incident management, audit, reporting and training and development capabilities.

Evotix offers a no-code, highly configurable, all-in-one EHS management software that centralizes incident management and risk mitigation, automates and streamlines safety management, improves regulatory compliance and simplifies audits and inspections.

“Multiquip heavily relied on cumbersome, processes that impeded our ability to maintain a proactive database. With Evotix, we can rapidly automate manual workflows, digitize our procedures and forms, and quickly create and route information between departments and facilities, improving operational efficiencies,” said Fernando Chavez, Multiquip's Environment, Health and Safety (EHS) Manager. “We're not only reinforcing a safe and healthy workplace, but drastically reducing incidents, while increasing efficiency and optimizing protocols.”

With Evotix, Multiquip gains transparency and better data management between all departments. The platform also provides efficiencies in training, risk management, incident reporting and investigation allowing EHS personnel to focus on identifying gaps, auditing safety protocols and process improvements.

Evotix's mobile health and safety app offers training materials and safety guidelines that workers can access anytime. The app also includes configurable forms for reporting and features geolocation, dropdown picklists and the ability to add images, making it convenient for employees to report and fix impending hazards.

"We are thrilled to collaborate with Multiquip and support their mission to prioritize and modernize their EHS operations," said Ben Woodruff, Evotix's senior vice president of global sales. "Our intuitive and engaging solution not only allows Multiquip to grow and scale but obtain real-time data, actionable intelligence and detailed reporting, resulting in superior decision-making across the organization. We look forward to working closely with the Multiquip team and driving positive EHS change together."

Multiquip's decision to partner with Evotix reflects its commitment to the well-being of its employees and a continued focus on excellence in all aspects of its business operations.
