The goal of New York Kids Runway is to highlight a diverse range of children's fashion styles, and kids of all backgrounds and abilities are encouraged apply for auditions. Children between the ages of 3 and 18 are eligible to apply, and prior modeling experience is not required but is a plus. NYKR welcomes children with a passion for fashion and a desire to learn more about the industry. During the casting process, each child will have the opportunity to impress a panel of judges and casting directors with their appearance, confidence, and ability to take direction.

"From the auditions, the training, to meeting the designers and walking on the runway, it has been such an amazing experience," said Allison Wesibrod, a participant in the organizer's Toronto Kids Fashion Week event. "It has empowered me as a girl because of the supportive and encouraging environment, and how it increased my confidence as a teenager."

If cast, models will work closely with a dedicated team ahead of the event to ensure they are comfortable and set up for success, including designers, stylists, and photographers to prepare for the fashion show. This includes training on how to walk and pose on the runway, fittings for their outfits, hair and makeup support, and rehearsals before the actual event.

"My favorite part about coaching is seeing the girls' transition. Really seeing their confidence come out as I critique a pose or runway move," said Kim Noseworthy, a modelling coach who has worked with the organizers on previous kids modelling events. "Like in real life, these are things that we work on. We work on our confidence, getting rejected, and picking ourselves back up. So being a coach for young girls, it's especially rewarding for me to watch them blossom, to watch their confidence grow, and to see them really shine out there."

Whether you're experienced or thinking about trying something new, New York Kids Runway is the place for all models. The upcoming model casting takes place on November 4th at Gibney Studio in Manhattan. To learn more and register for the casting process, please visit our website here.
