Portugal's NHR tax regime has become a beacon for those seeking not only sun-soaked shores, but also a strategic financial haven. This initiative offers some advantages for a period of 10 years, including tax exemptions on global income and a flat tax rate of 20 percent on active income derived from high-value-added activities in Portugal.

Joana Mendonça

Joana Mendonça, Head of Legal at Global Citizen Solutions explains why the time is now to act if you have been considering taking advantage of the NHR status: “On 10th October, the Portuguese announced the end of the Non-habitual residence (NHR) but the proposed changes will not affect current NHR status holders. Those who meet the conditions for registration as non-habitual residents on or before 31st December 2023, as well as holders of a valid residence visa on that date, can register for NHR status within the available timeframe until 31st March 2024. However, it is essential for eligible individuals to act swiftly to enhance their chances of obtaining the tax regime until the end of the scheme.”

This limited-time eligibility test, provided by Global Citizen Solutions, offers individuals the opportunity to explore their chances of securing NHR status before the impending changes take effect. Joana expands further and highlights the three different case scenarios in which individuals should act upon: “Time is of essence. For those who are currently visa or permit holders in Portugal, they should immediately enroll in the NHR program. European Union citizens who are interested in obtaining their tax residency in Portugal should also seek enrollment as such. And finally, for any other case scenario, it is important to look for a trusted advisor for strategic feasibility analysis to evaluate your visa options.”

This scheme encourages global citizens to relocate to Portugal, and once approved, they can enjoy substantial tax savings for a decade. The NHR tax regime aims to attract individuals who can contribute to Portugal's economy and culture, making it a win-win for both newcomers and the host country. Foreign investors holding a Golden Visa, digital nomads, or Tech Visa holders who plan to spend over 183 days a year in Portugal are all eligible to apply for NHR status.
