Paraguay with the objective of managing and advancing possible agreements through public-private participation with the government of Paraguay, focused on the development of solar installations and bioenergy.

Eureka Energy Corporation signed a representation agreement earlier in October with the Paraguay Ventures firm, which will be in charge of managing agreements to begin working on specific energy projects, opening the doors for private investments and the creation of thousands of jobs in the South American country.

“We are excited about our relationship with Paraguay Ventures, focused on developing projects in Paraguay around the construction of large-scale solar farms and the integration of biomass to produce energy-related products. This will create opportunities in the renewable energy and bioenergy sector for our company and for Paraguay,” said Roger Ford.

Paraguay Ventures is a company dedicated to the advice, management, and representation of local and foreign companies. They present Paraguay as a favorable place for investments,
