It is our goal to share something with our community that inspires hope.”

Michael Hershman

Encompassing more than six-acres from 38th to 41st Street east of First Avenue, Field of Light at Freedom Plaza will feature an array of 17,000 lowlight, fiber-optic stemmed spheres. Guests will be fully immersed in the installation as they are invited to walk the winding path framed by the city's iconic skyline and the East River waterfront.

Field of Light will be open Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings from 5pm to 9pm. Visitors are encouraged to visit fieldoflightnyc.com to schedule their complimentary timed ticket, and to explore volunteer opportunities. In celebration of the upcoming holiday season, Field of Light will extend its regular operating hours to include December 24, 26 and 27 as well as New Year's Eve, and New Year's Day. Timely updates and behind the scenes images are also available by following @fieldoflightnyc on Facebook, Instagram, and TikTok.

“I am honored to introduce Field of Light to New York. It is my hope that the installation will provide visitors with a contemplative environment to decompress, to recharge, and to communicate their feelings and dreams with family, friends, and neighbors,” said Munro. “Art is a universal language and light is the ultimate medium.”

“While the country continues to face obstacles and navigate the challenges of recovery, it is rewarding to deliver a love letter to New York,” Michael Hershman, CEO of Soloviev Group. “It is our goal to share something with our community that inspires hope and represents the ultimate freedom of expression and thought.”
