

Distribution Management Leverages Technology to Hit Targets

Veryable's On-Demand Labor Marketplace Allows Companies to Deliver on Promises

ST. LOUIS, MO, U.S., November 7, 2023

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Distribution Management

is in the business of delivering packages within 1-2 days to 99% of the U.S., matching the lead times set by ecommerce giants like Amazon. Like other companies in the logistics industry, Distribution Management experiences spikes in demand, operational bottlenecks, and employee callouts, so how can they deliver on these next-day deliveries? They are able to overcome these challenges and beat their competition, in part, because they are using on-demand labor found through Veryable tech-enabled Marketplace.

Our significant investments in technology for same-day fulfillment, coupled with Veryable's on-demand Marketplace allows us to solve real-time capacity gaps that support our 99.98% on-time SLA.”

“Distribution Management has made significant investments in technology to support our same-day fulfillment strategy,” said Alex McCoy, Supply Chain Director at Distribution Management. “Coupled with Veryable's on-demand Marketplace, it allows us to solve for real-time capacity gaps that support our 99.98% on-time SLA.”

This Marketplace helps workers and businesses get connected for mutually beneficial results. Anyone who downloads the app and passes their background check can bid on different Ops, or opportunities, and receive daily pay when they're available and willing to work. For warehousing and manufacturing companies, Veryable coaches them on how to eliminate operational bottlenecks that may be solved by improving labor practices. It's a win-win proposition for both businesses and individuals.

Distribution Management and Veryable

“Based on the nature of our industry, and our same-day SLA constraints, we need the ability to attract people real time to solve for capacity gaps and still deliver for our customers,” McCoy continued.

Distribution Management leverages several types of technology, including Veryable, to help navigate typical industry bottlenecks to deliver on the promises made to their customers. Instead of complaining about missing targets or paying unnecessary expenses because of these common challenges, they’re applying solutions to what they can control and meeting their SLAs. The operational landscape is changing quickly, and companies like Distribution Management are maintaining their place at the forefront of these developments to stay ahead of competition.
