Lyricos Learning introduced STEAM on Demand in early 2021. The service offers schools and after school programs an innovative solution for ensuring STEM+Arts learning begins in the early stages of education. The platform has established itself as an engaging resource that can be used by anyone, anywhere to teach hands-on STEM+Arts lessons. The service has a library with hundreds of interactive videos that teach lessons that are aligned with Next Generation Science and Common Core standards and support Cultural Proficiency and Universal Design for Learning.

"Our Nominees are revolutionizing the way we do business," said Sonya Rocca, Vice President of Events at SIIA. "Our awards program is a testament to the dedication, innovation, and outstanding contributions of individuals and organizations, like STEAM On Demand, in their respective fields. We take pride in shining a spotlight on excellence and fostering a culture of appreciation for those who strive for greatness."

According to Devina Bhojwani, the President of Lyricos Learning, since the platform's launch, STEAM on Demand has served close to 400 schools, 5,000 teachers and over 65,000 total students.

"We've been receiving such positive feedback from customers who are on the platform. Teachers have told us it makes their lives easier and Superintendents appreciate the diversity of our onscreen instructors and the ease of roll-out. In one district, we trained 3000 teachers over three days. That's how intuitive the platform is to use," said Bhojwani. "We are excited to be expanding our platform with games and assessments, and are working towards offering lessons in Spanish in the near future!"

CODiE Awards Winners will be announced May 21, 2024 during a virtual Celebration.
