Deeper Problems at Stake: Leaders Raise Concern for How Social Media is Affecting Mental Health, Especially for Youth

U.S. Surgeon General Dr. Vivek Murthy issued an advisory warning about social media's "profound risk of harm" to youth's mental health, and the risk of harmful content exposure and excessive use.

A Wall Street Journal investigation exposed that a popular social media platform is feeding teenagers "a diet of darkness" through steady recommendation streams to teens of videos on suicide and eating disorders.

Many parents are understandably concerned about their children online. Gan Jing means "clean". The New York-based social media startup seeks to set itself apart from these mainstream tech practices by putting traditional values, like kindness, before technology, and by taking a strict stance on data privacy. The platform prioritizes valuable information and inspirational content, freeing users from addiction loops.

Kyle Kemper, grassroots campaign manager for presidential candidate Robert F. Kennedy Jr. praises Gan Jing World for providing the world “a really beautiful solution.” He offered his congratulations to the online platform and shared,

“What the world needs is access to safe, clean, private, non-addictive social media or community engagement centers.”
