To add to the crisis, veterans are one of the most vulnerable groups regarding attempted and completed suicides. But one music group is trying to raise awareness and funding to combat veteran homelessness and suicide with a new song, "We Got Your 6." The group's latest song aligns with this mission by shedding light on the mental health crisis U.S. Veterans face with powerful lyrics that hold our government accountable and ask why our country doesn't do more to support those who put everything on the line.

The video opens with a poignant image of a veteran in obvious mental distress, with the opening bars of the Star-Spangled Banner heard in the background. The video then cuts to shots of veterans trying to navigate life and relationships, including clips of veterans living on the streets and begging for money. The gravelly vocals question our government's motivations, repeatedly asking in the chorus, "America, Land of the Free / Why do you let your soldiers lay out in the streets? / You send billions overseas / How do you do this so consciously?" The song also asks why our elected officials stand by and allow thousands of veterans to die by suicide each year.

In 2023, the US government will spend $2.7 billion in caring for veterans, including mental health services, suicide prevention, combating homelessness, and more. But for The Bootleggers Music Group, this still isn't enough, especially considering veteran homelessness and suicide continue to be a problem.

"To say we're angry at the injustices perpetrated against our national heroes is an understatement," said The Bootleggers Music Group president and CEO Paul E. Jones. "We must continually call out for people to do more while supporting initiatives that drive change for our veterans. We hope that "We Got Your 6" helps raise awareness of veteran homelessness and suicide and encourages others to not only give financially to help eradicate these ills but also to reach out to their elected officials and demand change. Our heroes deserve it."
