Nurturing Growth: Public and Private Support for Irrigation Projects

The sprinkler irrigation market is set to flourish, driven by the surge in public and private support for irrigation projects in developing countries. A symbiotic relationship between the public and private sectors has emerged, providing advisory services and information to meet the needs of rural communities and farmers. According to the World Bank Group, an investment of $2 billion is required to irrigate 1 million hectares of land in southern Ukraine. The collaboration between public funds and private sector solutions is vital in bridging the financing gap for large-scale irrigation projects. Thus, the escalating support from both sectors is a key driver propelling the growth of the sprinkler irrigation market.
