Catalysts for Growth: Meeting the Demand for Meat and Aquaculture Products

The compound feed market is poised for expansion, primarily driven by the escalating demand for meat and aquaculture products. As a vital component designed for human consumption, meat products encompass various animal sources. Simultaneously, the commercial proliferation of aquatic plants and animals, known as aquaculture, has surged. Compound feed, enriched with essential nutrients, plays a pivotal role in ensuring the health of farmed fish, contributing to the heightened demand for meat and aquaculture products globally. According to a report from OECD iLibrary, worldwide animal protein consumption is anticipated to rise by 14% by 2030, compared to the period of 2018-2020.

Key Players and Innovations: Pioneering Progress

Prominent players in the compound feed market include Cargill Inc., The Archer-Daniels-Midland Company, New Hope Group, and Nutreco N.V. Notably, product innovation emerges as a significant trend, with companies actively developing novel products featuring unique attributes. For instance, Cargill introduced poultry feed infused with essential oils under its Nutrena brand, Naturewise. These oils contribute to enhanced egg production, size, and weight, along with improved palatability and a fresh aroma.

Regional Dynamics: Asia-Pacific Leading, South America Accelerating

In 2022, Asia-Pacific claimed the top spot in the compound feed market, with South America anticipated to exhibit the fastest growth in the forecast period. Comprehensive regional coverage includes Asia-Pacific, Western Europe, Eastern Europe, North America, South America, the Middle East, and Africa.
