

Georgia Court of Appeals Rules Hemp-Derived Delta 8, Delta 10 Thc, and More Not Controlled Substances

The Georgia Court of Appeals has ruled that Delta 8 THC, Delta 10 THC, and other hemp-derived cannabinoids are no longer controlled substances.

ATLANTA, GA, USA, November 21, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Georgia State Court of Appeals

Such derivatives of the hemp plant continue to prove how instrumental it is for many folks with respect to general health discomforts, as well as mental health as we navigate daily stresses,” has ruled that Delta 8 THC, Delta 10 THC, and other hemp-derived cannabinoids are no longer controlled substances. While this is not a full endorsement of the sale of all THC products, which was proposed and passed by the state Senate under Senate Bill 22 but not the House, it helps pave the way for the legal sale in the state of Georgia. With a focus on education and the holiest health benefits of cannabinoids, the Court of Appeals ruling is of particular interest to The Georgia Hemp Company, which has prioritized bringing awareness of hemp and CBD education by bringing its brand into the community and creating a dialogue.

"We are thrilled and proud of the rulings made by the Georgia State Court of Appeals. Such derivatives of the hemp plant continue to prove how instrumental it is for many folks with respect to general health discomforts as well as mental health as we all try to navigate the world's daily stresses," commented The Georgia Hemp Company co-owner Ryan Dills. "We at the Georgia Hemp Company and many other industry advocates will continue to champion the plant's viability regarding health and durable goods, and we know these initiatives are far from over. Still, with this week's ruling and folks simply beginning to be more accountable and practical with their health- we know the importance of continuing such efforts toward education, awareness, and access."
