Growing Household Gardening Drives Market Expansion
A notable driver for the personal goods repair and maintenance market is the surge in household gardening.

As gardening becomes a prevalent hobby, the demand for maintaining home and garden equipment is on the rise. Tools used in gardening, if not properly maintained, can spread infections in the garden. According to a study by RubyHome, 55% of American households engage in gardening, with 18.3 million households starting gardening activities in 2021. A similar trend is observed in Canada, where 51% of respondents grew at least one variety of fruit or vegetable in their garden, influenced in part by the pandemic. This increase in household gardening activities is expected to propel the personal goods repair and maintenance market forward.
