The ceremony was helmed by Astrid Hebert and Hossein Farmani, Co-Founders of the 3C Awards, while SIT Award Jury member Charles O. Job, an accomplished designer and architect, presented all the trophies. With degrees from Oxford Brookes University and experience in global architecture practices, he's known for his commitment to simplicity in research, temporary architecture, and furniture design.

Hossein Farmani, Co-Founder of 3C Awards, shared his excitement at the gala awards: "The brilliance on display tonight in interior and furniture design is awe-inspiring. Witnessing these remarkable projects receiving the recognition they deserve is a testament to the unparalleled creativity within our design community. It's a celebration of spaces that not only function beautifully but also evoke emotions and leave a lasting imprint."

Astrid Hebert, Co-Founder of 3C Awards, shared her thoughts on the successful night: "Tonight was a lively celebration of designers rocking the world of interiors and furniture. The atmosphere was charged with the energy of innovation, and it's incredibly fulfilling to see these visionaries being acknowledged. The gala was a true celebration of the transformative power of design in our daily lives."

Following the awards ceremonies, attendees were treated to a sumptuous cocktail dinner reception—a perfect opportunity for professionals to connect, share insights, and revel in the shared passion for innovation and creative expression. The atmosphere was truly festive, ensuring everyone had a delightful time and adding to the overall experience of the evening.

As the night concluded, the excitement lingered, and the SIT Awards are already gearing up for another spectacular event.
