In order to protect missing girls, USPA Nationwide Security and Kingsman Philanthropic Corp share a common goal. Kingsman Philanthropic Corp was founded by Michael Evans in 2005 to aid women facing domestic violence without the means to hire personal security. It was, however, in 2011 that Michael Evans took on the role of security for Lisa Ling's investigation into the trafficking of young girls that a significant shift occurred. Kingsman has shifted its focus to investigating, locating, and rescuing these vulnerable individuals as a result of Evans' experience with missing girls.

The parent organization of Kingsman Philanthropic Corp, USPA Nationwide Security, plays an essential role in supporting the organization's mission. With USPA Nationwide Security's expertise in security services, Kingsman is able to conduct thorough investigations and provide comprehensive assistance to missing girls with additional resources and capabilities.

In their joint efforts to locate and assist missing girls, Kingsman and USPA Nationwide Security have made significant progress.

Kingsman Philanthropic Corporation's unwavering commitment to protecting missing girls will undoubtedly make a significant difference in the lives of those affected as Kingsman Philanthropic Corp continues to grow alongside USPA Nationwide Security.
