provider of innovative energy-based devices, today announced a partnership with PDO Max, the developer of PDO AfterGlo™, the first polydioxanone (PDO) topical serum skin booster. This new PDO serum improves the appearance of fine lines, wrinkles, and hyperpigmentation, while improving skin complexion.(1) Rohrer will offer PDO AfterGlo to its practice partners as a post-treatment skin topical to enhance patient outcomes in combination with its award-winning portfolio of energy-based devices.

PDO AfterGlo is a polymer skin booster formulated with polydioxanone (PDO) powder and hyaluronic acid (HA), which is a safe and effective option for correction of volume loss and rejuvenation of photoaging skin. PDO threads, which are composed of the same biodegradable polymer as this new serum, have been safely used in various surgeries for over 30 years and have become a leading non-invasive aesthetic procedure. PDO is an ingredient that is certified by the FDA and naturally dissolves and is absorbed by the body in about 6-12 months. As it dissolves, it aids in the production of collagen.

PDO AfterGlo used in combination with energy-based device treatments designed in part to penetrate the serum into a patient's skin, the result is a noticeable improvement in the appearance of fine lines, wrinkles, and hyperpigmentation. Rohrer Aesthetics will also distribute the Glowpin™ by PDO Max which is an airless pump that is specifically designed for the application of topical skin boosters to flow easily and effectively for optimal absorption.

“We are excited to partner with PDO Max to bring PDO AfterGlo to our customers,” said NJ Wazaney, CEO of Blue Ocean Aesthetics Holdings. “PDO AfterGlo is a truly innovative product that will complement our existing portfolio of energy-based device treatments and help us to provide our customers with a patient offering that proves even better results.”

Rohrer will offer PDO AfterGlo as a post-treatment skin topical to enhance patient outcomes in combination with its award-winning portfolio of energy-based device treatments. This includes treatments such as Rohrer's Pixel8 RF Microneedling, a microneedling radiofrequency device that smooths and tightens skin.

"We have seen that the combination of PDO AfterGlo, Emer Skin, and energy-based device treatments provides patients with exceptional results," said Jason Emer, MD, a leading Cosmetic Dermatologist and Surgeon. "We utilize PDO AfterGlo on many of our patients looking for noticeable improvement in skin texture and wrinkle reduction."
