For many, Medicare plans are a cornerstone of healthcare coverage. While these plans typically renew automatically, Dan Burghardt Insurance advises beneficiaries to actively review their options. "Coverage and costs are in constant flux, and so are your healthcare needs," says Dan Burghardt, owner of Dan Burghardt Insurance. "Licensed agents are equipped to guide anybody through these changes free of charge, ensuring you're not missing out on potential benefits."

The Imperative of Open Enrollment Comparison

The volatile nature of marketplace premiums, especially for those receiving premium tax credits, makes an annual review a prudent choice. "Many don't realize that new marketplace plans could influence the subsidies they receive, and a switch to different coverage might reduce out-of-pocket costs substantially," adds Burghardt. Comparing plans could reveal more affordable options with similar benefits, and even if beneficiaries decide to retain their current plan, this process ensures they are making an informed decision.

Critical Open Enrollment Dates for 2024

Dan Burghardt Insurance highlights two important dates in the open enrollment calendar:

Medicare Open Enrollment: Started October 15th and closing on December 7th, this period is crucial for making changes to Medicare plans. Burghardt notes, "This is the annual opportunity to review and adjust Medicare coverage. The team is poised to assist in evaluating the new benefits offered by trusted providers that could save money."

ACA Open Enrollment: Beginning on November 1st and ending on December 15th, this window offers the chance to evaluate various ACA plans. "With the ACA enrollment, it's possible to find plans that better fit budgets and needs, thanks to the subsidies designed to make healthcare accessible for all," Burghardt explains.
