Pest Incidence Fuels Market Growth

The escalation in the incidence of pests and bugs within households emerges as a significant driver propelling the services to buildings and dwellings market. Pests such as ants, termites, roaches, mosquitoes, and rodents pose various hazards, ranging from structural damage to acting as disease vectors. Termites, for example, can cause costly structural damage, while mosquitoes and ticks can contribute to the spread of diseases. Additionally, pests like cockroaches and rodents can lead to the transmission of diseases such as salmonella and rat bite fever, triggering demand for building and dwelling services. The 2021 American Housing Survey reported 2.9 million sightings of roaches and rodents in U.S. homes, emphasizing the need for pest control services. The increase in pest incidents is anticipated to be a driving force for the services to buildings and dwellings market.
