Commonly observed types of interior doors are panel door, bypass door, bifold door, pocket door, and others. Among these, the panel sub-segment accounted for the largest interior doors market share in 2020, owing to its space saving ability. Further, the swinging type doors under the mechanism segment noticed a higher demand, due to easy maintenance. Furthermore, under the material type, the wooden interior doors registered a higher number of sales as compared to doors made of other materials.

In addition, the market is analyzed with respect to different applications in industrial verticals such as residential and non-residential. The market is mainly driven by a rise in construction activities due to rapid urbanization. However, the high installation cost of interior doors restrains the growth of the market. The advancements in door design and manufacturing technologies have significantly increased the variety of interior doors available in the market. In addition, development of computer-based technology has enabled the homeowners to choose perfect interior doors from the comfort of their homes.

Homeowners are increasingly opting for doors that seamlessly blend into their surroundings, creating a sense of openness and fluidity within living spaces. Gone are the days when doors were merely utilitarian fixtures; today, they are integral components of interior design. The demand for aesthetically pleasing, high-quality interior doors has been steadily rising, driven by a growing awareness of design trends and an increased focus on creating unique, personalized living spaces.

Innovations in manufacturing technologies are enabling the production of doors with intricate designs and precise detailing. CNC machining, 3D printing, and laser cutting are transforming the industry, providing designers and homeowners with unprecedented creative possibilities. With an increased emphasis on sustainability, there is a growing demand for interior doors made from recycled or responsibly sourced materials. Manufacturers are responding by adopting eco-friendly practices and offering green alternatives to meet this demand.

The rise of e-commerce has made it easier for consumers to explore a wide range of options and make informed decisions about interior doors. Online platforms provide a convenient avenue for purchasing doors that suit individual tastes and preferences. Also, advancements in fiber glass technology have made the doors lighter as well as more durable. These factors positively influence the interior doors market growth.

Furthermore, on the basis of end user, the residential segment is anticipated to witness growth rapidly during the forecast period, owing to the launch of many affordable housing schemes across many countries worldwide. As we celebrate one year of exploration and discovery, the interior doors market stands as a testament to the ever-evolving nature of design. From smart solutions to sustainable practices, the industry is embracing change and offering a plethora of options for homeowners and designers alike.
