John Iadarola of The Damage Report will host TYT's coverage. He shared, "While President Biden and the Democratic National Convention seem dead-set on denying the American people the opportunity to see all of the possible candidates mix it up in a debate, we're happy to hand them the microphone and let them react in real-time as Ron DeSantis, Nikki Haley and the rest lay out their agenda on the GOP debate stage."

TYT proudly stands as the first news network to provide an inclusive forum to all 2024 Democratic Presidential candidates.”

Judith Benezra*

Upholding democracy is part of TYT's values, and this coverage format is in response to the Democratic establishment not doing anything to ensure that primary candidates are heard. Instead, the party is promoting an unhealthy primary. TYT will take this opportunity to inform voters of their choices and give the megaphone to the primary candidates.

TYT Head of Programming Judith Benezra said, "TYT proudly stands as the first news network to provide an inclusive forum to all 2024 Democratic Presidential candidates. Our commitment to dynamic and robust discussions allows them to not only respond to the positions of their Republican counterparts, but also offer their own policy positions—something viewers and voters unfortunately won't be able to see anywhere else."

TYT's coverage will broadcast from their studio in Los Angeles, with Williamson and Phillips joining via Zoom, starting at 10pm ET/7pm PT on TYT.com/Live.
