The importance of this release lies in recognizing that women's rights are crucial for social, economic, and political progress both locally and globally. Shocking statistics reveal that one in three women have experienced physical or sexual assault. Additionally, only 22% of global political leaders are women while women earn nearly 20% less than men. Furthermore, it is disheartening that only 24% of members of Congress are women. However, change can occur if communities invest in supporting their local women—a change that starts at home.

Natalie Venezia, Founder and CEO of 365 Foundation Inc., emphasizes the urgency for action:

“

Empowering our community means investing in the potential of every woman—breaking down barriers by providing opportunities for leadership roles.”

“We cannot remain silent when faced with these staggering disparities,” said Venezia. “Empowering our community means investing in the potential of every woman—breaking down barriers by providing opportunities for leadership roles.”

Advocacy plays a significant role within 365 Foundation Inc.'s overall strategy as they strive to use their platform to disrupt harmful narratives surrounding gender inequality and uplift voices within their community who fight for gender justice.

“Our action-driven programs shed light on gender justice changemakers through creative storytelling mediums such as art galleries showcasing photography exhibits,” explained Venezia passionately. “Through theatre projects or engaging conversations on our podcast ‘In the Pink,’ we aim to educate audiences about important issues while inspiring them to take immediate action.”

With an unwavering commitment to amplifying marginalized voices within society, 365 Foundation Inc.'s blog posts highlight current gender justice news and celebrate the remarkable achievements of women in their community.
