ABOUT SCOTT MARSI

As an early teen, Skott’s first “graffiti tag” was his own rendering of the iconic Gumby, an American clay humanoid character created by Art Clokey. Over the years, his work has evolved; drawing inspiration from Picasso, Jackson Pollock, and graffiti artist Banksy to produce what Skott has dubbed “Controlled Chaos”. In 2011, Skott was asked to paint live at Art Basel Miami which became a driving force for exposure. He made a big impression during the show and was asked to participate in a group exhibition at the Art Place Gallery. Simultaneously, a network of high-profile collectors was eager to own a canvas – Jeremy Shockey, a New York Giants Super Bowl Champion and singer/songwriter Christina Aguilera were amongst the many to collect his work. Skott was also invited by the Office of H. H. The Crown Prince of Dubai (UAE) as part of 100 of the world's best street artists, to paint the largest graffiti scroll ever, now in the Guinness Book of World Records.
