"I am fortunate enough to have known the family of the bride for close to 40 years. I'm not surprised that this bride chose to donate her venue deposit to Parents Helping Parents. The bride's family and thousands of other families have literally been saved by the extensive services that Parents Helping Parents offers," said Cindy Chavez, Board of Supervisors at County of Santa Clara.

"It was a really happy and beautiful evening for all the families that came to the party," expressed Maria Daane, Executive Director of Parents Helping Parents.

Parents Helping Parents serves families raising children with disabilities. The bride, who wants to keep the focus on Parents Helping Parents and was happy to remain anonymous, has a sister with special needs. When her wedding was abruptly canceled, she aimed to give back to a community that held significant meaning for her family.

"I wanted to give back to this community that means so much to my family," she said. "Seeing the joy this event brought them turned a devastating situation into something beautiful."

Generosity shone through from all involved to make the event possible. Expressions Floral, who was originally preparing floral arrangements for the wedding, exemplified true understanding and flexibility in a challenging moment. Their gesture to redirect wedding flowers to bring joy and brightness to others speaks volumes about their empathy and dedication to spreading positivity beyond the confines of a canceled event.

Bill Zaruka, CEO of Wedgewood Weddings, echoed this sentiment: "We're moved by how this bride transformed a difficult situation into a chance to help others."

The upbeat party featured themed décor, entertainment, dancing, and food. Smiles abounded as attendees dazzled in formalwear and snapped photos. The bride's selfless gesture offered community, fun, and connection.

"Wedgewood Weddings is honored to have helped create such a meaningful event that spread light to deserving attendees," Zaruka said. "This is the heart of why we do what we do."
